Canada is an extremely diverse country that stretches from the Pacific to the Atlantic Ocean. It is the fourth largest country in the world, featuring a plethora of different terrain.

Canada's ten provinces and three territories are all completely different, with each having something to offer. Lakes, mountains, valleys, waterfalls and countryside are just a few of the different things offered throughout the country. It also happens to have the longest coastline in the world.

There are so many places to visit in Canada, from large vibrant cities to small mountain villages, as well as everything in between. Here are the 15 best towns to visit in Canada.

1. Niagara-on-the-Lake, Ontario
